Early Career Award

Do you know of an early career researcher who has made an outstanding contribution to the science of physics?

Nominations are now open

The New Journal of Physics (NJP) Early Career Award recognises researchers, who are making a significant contribution to the science of physics.

Nominee criteria

The award is open to all researchers working in the physical sciences who meet the following criteria:

- Early-career scientist (less than five years since PhD qualification – i.e. defended in 2018 or thereafter – allowing for career breaks)
- Author of at least one article published in/accepted for publication in NJP in the 12 months prior to the award closing date of 16 June 2023.

The winner will be announced in October 2023 and will receive a prize of €3,000, plus one full APC waiver to be used in NJP by the end of 2024. The winner will also be entitled to a 50% APC waiver on the next two papers in NJP, and an official NJP Early Career Award certificate. Please note, in the event of more than one winner elected, the prize will be shared accordingly.
